FORT WILDERNESS GETS AN ADDITION

If a band of Seminole Indians were to stop by the Fort Wilderness Meadow Trading Post for supplies and look across the pond, they would think that some new settlers had moved to Florida with the decided intention to stay. And while — sure enough — there is a genuine log cabin going up over there, it's not exactly for settlers of the permanent type, nor is it your standard, ordinary everyday log cabin. Not by a long shot!

While most log cabins were built with lumber felled and sized on the cabin site, the wood for this particular cabin was cut, sized, notched, marked, and lot of other things, up in North Carolina by Rocky River Log Homes, Incorporated, an outfit that designs and builds log cabins professionally. Once the cabin is completed it resembles for all the world a real-life size set of Lincoln Logs, ready to be assembled on site anywhere the purchaser chooses. The pioneers never had it so good!

There are a few other differences from the originals too. While the pioneers used mud to seal the cracks between the logs on their cabins, the modern versions utilize rubber, sponge-like strips to keep bugs out and the environmentally controlled air in.

And there will be no mowing of a sod roof for our landscape hosts with this cabin! Instead, modern asphalt architectural shingles will be used. Add to these features such amenities as a concrete floor, specially treated wood that will withstand both insects and weather, and corners that come already notched and ready for assembly and you have a cabin that goes up in no time.

Carpenter Karl Wegner temporarily reverts back to hand tools as he carefully chisels out a notch which will cradle a roof pole for the cabin's front porch.

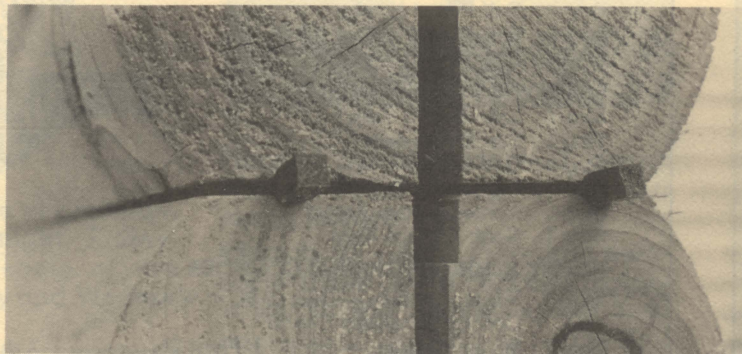

Later, Karl switched off to a modern electric drill and with some extra hands holding the log, bores a hole in the end of a rather large log.

Once completed, the cabin will be the new Fort Wilderness Bike Barn facility where our guests may go to rent bicycles, canoes, or electric-powered carts with which to tour our wonderful wilderness areas. The cabin itself will be completely assembled by the end of the first week in April, with all the electrical and other major work finished on or about the first of May. Guests can expect to see the new facility open for business sometime this summer after our own carpenters move in to do finish work on the interior.

Besides being a wonderfully themed addition to the Fort Wilderness area, the new cabin will feature much more storage space than is presently available in the existing bike barn, as well as being more centrally located for our guests. Perhaps the best feature of the new cabin will be, according to Dennis Burke, of Fort Wilderness Services, "... the great fishin' out front!"

"Take it all around," as Huck Finn would have observed, the new 1,440-square-foot cabin will be a welcome addition to Fort Wilderness, both to our guests and to the Walt Disney World cast members.

Each log is double-insulated from the next, making these modern log cabins some of the best insulated buildings around, surpassing even some modern block buildings.

EMPLOYEE BUS TRANSPORTATION AVAILABLE

In addition to carpooling and van pool programs, there are three buses which service the Walt Disney World Resort Complex daily, for the exclusive use of cast members and those applying for jobs with us.

WALT DISNEY PRODUCTIONS AND RETLAW REACH AN AGREEMENT

Walt Disney Productions has announced that it has reached agreement in principle with Retlaw Enterprises, Inc., regarding the acquisition by Walt Disney Productions of certain assets from Retlaw. The agreement in principle contemplates that Walt Disney Productions would acquire from Retlaw the monorail system in operation at Disneyland Park in Anaheim, Calif., for $2.5 million in cash. It also contemplates that Walt Disney Productions would receive a five year option from Retlaw to acquire all of Retlaw's rights to the Walter E. Disney name for $45 million, payable not later than three years after exercise in cash, or, at Walt Disney Productions' option, in its common stock, with interest at 10%. Walt Disney Productions would grant Retlaw an option to extend for five years the lease of the narrow-gauge steam railroad at Disneyland Park, which presently expires in 1991, subject to the right of Walt Disney Productions to acquire the steam railroad from Retlaw, at anytime after five years from the date of stockholder approval of the transaction, at a price to be determined.

Retlaw, a corporation organized by the late Walt Disney, is owned by members of his family, including Diane Disney Miller, the wife of Ronald W. Miller, President and Chief Operating Officer and a director of Walt Disney Productions. Retlaw has advised the Company that it intends to contribute its rights to the name, subject to Walt Disney Productions' option, to a nonprofit charitable corporation whose principal purpose will be to perpetuate the name, works and life of Walt Disney through the funding of charitable and educational activities.

Retlaw has for a number of years licensed Walt Disney Productions to use, and authorize others to use, the Walter E. Disney name for certain purposes and received royalty payments from Walt Disney Productions for such uses. In addition, Retlaw has for a number of years owned the monorail and narrow-gauge steam railroad systems at Disneyland Park which it has operated under leases from Walt Disney Productions.

SAVE IT AT HOME

For a Cooler Kitchen — (or) You Can Teach An Old Cook New Tricks

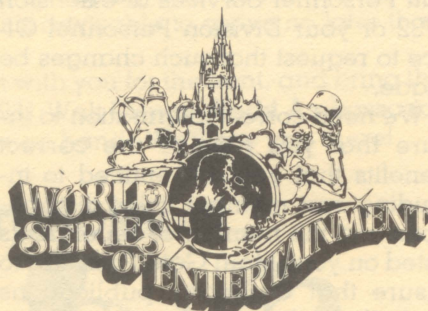

Most of us learned to cook before we were faced with the high energy costs of the 1980's. Some of the cooking techniques we learned may not be the most energy efficient. Here are a few suggestions on how to carve the fat from your kitchen energy use.

- Keep the lid on! Liquids will come to a boil faster, using less energy, in a covered pan or kettle. There will also be less humidity in your kitchen when you keep pans covered (this can save your air-conditioner some work).
- Use as little water as possible when boiling or steaming foods. You'll save both energy and nutrients.
- Thaw frozen foods before cooking unless thawing will reduce the quality of the food. (Thaw in refrigerator to avoid spoilage.)

- Instead of boiling water for iced tea, make solar tea. Place tea bags and water in a glass container, set it outdoors in direct sunlight, and in an hour or two enjoy a refreshing treat.
- Small appliances can often do cooking jobs more efficiently than the range or oven. Microwave ovens are especially energy-efficient for cooking small meals. Use small appliances if you have them.
- Limit oven preheating to a few minutes. In fact, you don't have to pre-heat at all when baking casseroles, vegetables, roasts, and other foods that don't have to rise or cook quickly.

More information on saving energy and money in your home is available from the Energy Information Center, Governor's Energy Office, The Capitol, Tallahassee, Florida 32301, phone (904) 488-6143.

One of the most interesting games of the week was between the "new kids on the block," the Resort Raiders and the perennial champions, The Trammies, both with 5 wins/no losses to their record.

The resort gang jumped out to an early 10-0 lead in the very first inning. The Trammies struggled to bring the score to 11-3 in favor of Resort Raiders by the third inning. Then no one scored until the top of the seventh inning when the Resort Raiders added two more runs to bring the score to 13-3. It looked like a certain win for the Resort Raiders until the Trammies came to bat at the bottom of the seventh when they lashed back with seven big runs, bringing the score to 13-10, with only one out. But the Resort Raiders tightened up and retired the last two batters to run their record to 6-0 and win the game with a 13-10 final.
